PREFACE

The law of the Church plainly declares that, whenever High Mass is celebrated, the Proper of the Mass must be sung or at least recited. The reason for this is obvious: for it is the Proper and the Proper alone that differentiates one Mass from another—the sadness of Advent and Lent from the joy of Christmas and the triumph of Easter.

I have compiled a version of the Proper for the Sundays of the year which is within the capacity of any Choir. In this version there are but four sets of melodies, one for each season of the year: Advent, Lent, Easter Time and for the Sundays after Pentecost. Each set is composed of very simple melodies written in consonance with the character of the Season. The same set being used for three or four months allows the singers to devote all their attention to the Latin text without spending time in learning new melodies every week. I have used this system for several years, and have found the result very satisfactory and neither tedious nor monotonous.

As many of our singers have a difficulty in reading Latin, I have divided the text as often as possible by the sign V, which is intended to be a help to obtain a clear reading in long sentences. The pause indicated by this sign should only be used when really necessary, for whenever possible the whole phrase should be sung continuously. The whole matter is left to the discretion of the director.
